WORLD SERIES ARAXA 1 XCC AND XCO 2025

Just like last year, the WORLD SERIES started again in Brazil. This time, both race weekends are World Cups in Araxa. The tracks (XCC, XCO) last weekend were identical to last year's. Littered with countless roots, some huge, rocks, and rollers and jumps (table, double with huge gaps). To say that the track was incredibly fun is an understatement. The XCC race (Shortrace approx. 20 min) took place on Saturday. I had to start from the third row. I didn't get off to a good start because the competitors in front of me aren't good starters. After a short distance, I found myself in the leading group. In the 3rd of 6 laps, I accelerated and was able to pull away. However, Isabella Holmgren (CAN) was then able to catch up again. I couldn't keep her pace and dropped back to 3rd position. In the last uphill lap, I suddenly had a flat tire in the back. I then dropped back to 8th place.

So, Sunday start from the first row. I had another super start. After a short time, I had already created a small gap. Right at the front, I also went into the first climb, further back it was congested. Further up, Valentina Corvi (ITA) caught up. At the end of the climb, she overtook me. I rode very close behind her downhill when Valentina suddenly moved to the side, and I couldn't avoid a larger stone and rode directly over it. The front tire was flat, but worse, I hit my head very hard on the handlebars. I had to go to the tech zone to change the tire. I got a severe headache and couldn't ride properly anymore. I finished 19th. Next weekend, next chance!.

See you soon
